Publication of the revised standards

A working draft of the revised Organic Standards, resulting from the first three ballots, will be made available this summer to the members of the CGSB Committee on Organic Agriculture in order for the organic sector to be prepared for the implementation of the Organic Products Regulations which will take place in December 2008. This version must obtain the support of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency and of the Department of Justice, and then, will be ratified by the Standards Council of Canada (SCC). Once ratified, the revised 2006 standards will be used as the reference by the Organic Products Regulations. The CGSB is committed to accelerate the process in order to allow synchronization of the publication of the standards together with the implementation of the regulations (December 14, 2008).

However, Canada Organic Office is categorical: since the certification will be mandatory as soon as December 2008, for the products referred as « organic » and transported from one province to another or between Canada and its trading partners, it is imperative that the producers or processors, who are not yet certified, must undertake the steps to obtain certification immediately in order to comply with Regulations taking effect on December 14, 2008. All certification processes are presently conducted in compliance with the 2006 standards currently published. It is advised not to wait for the publication of the revised standards to obtain certification.

Agriculture and Agri-food Canada (AAFC) is pleased to participate in this project. AAFC is committed to working with industry partners to increase public awareness of the importance of the agriculture and agri-food industry to Canada. Opinions expressed in this document are those of the OFC and not necessarily those of AAFC.

A Transition Committee to ensure successful implementation

The OFC established a Transition Committee composed of representatives from all sectors so that certifiers, producers, processors and merchants can adapt progressively to the implementation of the regulations and comply effectively with the revised standards. New regulations will result in important changes for the organic products market. A time frame will have to be defined within which the organic products that are no longer compliant with the new regulations are withdrawn from the market, and for consumers and retailers to familiarize themselves with the new market rules. The evaluation of the similarities with organic standards of countries trading with Canada will also have an important impact on the transition measures. Canada Organic Office will consult the sector to establish such similarities and define the organic import-export rules.

Amendments to the Organic Products Regulations soon to be submitted to the organic sector

The Canada Organic Office plans to submit very shortly the amended Organic Products Regulations. In fact, the Regulations will include the rules regarding organic product labeling. These rules, which were already part of the organic standards, are of primary importance. They set forth for the consumer the meaning of a certified organic product that is compliant with the standards. The Regulations will complete many chapters of the Standards. It is very possible that the Canada Organic logo will be modified to conform with general public labeling policies of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency. This modified logo will be presented during the pre-publication of the amended Regulations that should take place in the beginning of October 2008.
